Edition made for Appendix to Desmond, Music and the moderni, 1300-1350 (CUP, 2018). Text follows Durham, and corrections to the text transmitted in Durham are noted here. Tr 8 guttris / 9 tua / Mot 2 lucis / 4 vesperescat / 8 scalor / 9 limbus / 11 abissus /

Notes on the readings

As the editors note, numbers here count breves, not bars. Tr = triplum, Mot = motetus, Ten/T = tenor.

- The copy text is the three-voice version found in Durham; variants in the other three complete sources for this motet are listed below (there is a short lacuna in Iv from breve 74 to the first pitch in breve 86 in the triplum due to manuscript damage). The readings in Chantilly and Modena are very close to those in Durham, whereas there are several pitch variants (especially in the hocket sections) in Iv. A contratenor part is added in Iv and Modena, and Chantilly has an alternate contratenor. The numbers below refer to the breve units. Variants between the sources in ligatures, dots, and notated accidentals are not noted. Tr 31.1 Iv f

Texts

Triplum

Apta caro plumis ingenii desidie barrum, et studii laboris que foco mollicies, et coniuga centro segnicies: quo pigrescit, plumbum consumito; nablum tange vocis plus solito, duc pulmonis carbasis cardinem lingue, Lini guttris arundinem. Tuam, Clio, litturam litere quam conetur in preces fundere. Visco prius amoto pectoris, omni scalpro poliat rethoris, crispatura Cirrei pectinis, stillo, laudes parentis virginis: misereri qua sola trahitur iustus Minos, et qua mors moritur. Age caro: rumpe vivaria lacrimarum, precum suspiria tam potenti nomen profunditus. Suum tuus spiri tum spiritus ad erigi poscat impervia, noys alme Tempe, celestia, et Cerberus, quem fames torqueat, te speratam perdere lugeat. O propria bonitate dea, Deo nupta, tocius ydea, forme cuius non posse figere gradus pudet naturam misere, Carni humane subveni propere.

Motetus

Flos virginum, decus et species, adultere luci connubio non indiga vel auri radio, si gemmarum, vesperascit dies, te surgente. Decor ipse, quo nichil gracius et a grata gratie linea, quo, Stix atrum sol, squalor trabea, limus ostrum quod tinxit Tirius fit, candente. Multabissus virtutum, calculo numerorum non certa, filia nati, mater patris, plue, pia, lacrimarum nimbos pro populo te poscente!
